

The Sacramento Bee publishes an interview with Mr. Gorham and a Bee reporter. The following is a portion of the account:

Reporter—Can you prove your accusations against Booth, that he used the people's offices to buy votes to make himself Senator?

Gorham—Do you think I'm a d—d fool?

Reporter—No; I don't take you for a fool.

Gorham—Well, I would be a fool to make such charges if I were not able to prove them.

Reporter—But those who told you the facts may go back on you, and swear they never said any such thing.

Gorham—But they can't go back; I have their statements in black and white, sworn to before a Notary Public.

Reporter—But they may, like Mrs. Tilton, swear that they lied or were coerced.

Gorham—They are not the kind of people to be coerced; and I have no fear of them attempting to prove themselves liars.

Reporter—Are these proofs convincing?

Gorham—Yes; they will convince anybody save the assistant pastor of Plymouth.

Reporter—Are there many cases of this kind?

Gorham—Enough to satisfy the most exacting, and more are coming to me almost every day. Mr. Booth shall have his fill of them if he dares to deny the charges. But he will not make denial. He knows that the charges are true, and he knows that I hold the certain proof, and as sure as he denies them, even by affidavit, I will let it loose.

WAS MISTAKEN.—Captain Charles Warner was in town. He tells a good story of a hotel scene near Calistoga, and reaches for its entire truth. Warner and Bob Howland being near Calistoga, stopped for breakfast, a few mornings since, at the hotel of Foss, the famous stage driver. At the table were two English gentlemen, who evidently were not as much accustomed to the ways of this country as they will be if they remain here a few years. On the table was a small bottle of Tabasco, which, as our readers know, is the concentrated extract of red peppers, and, though about the color of tomato catsup, has more real pungency in a drop of it than there is in a barrel of catsup. Taking up the bottle one of the Englishmen remarked to the other: "Look here, Bill (Bill), what do you think of a landlord who supplies catsup in bottles like this 'ere for grown people? Wouldn't it be a good job to go to beat it half? By Jove, I'll do it!" He continued, and proceeded to act upon his own suggestion. Pouring the contents of the bottle on a piece of tripe, he rolled it on his fork and down it went. A moment later, he left the table with the tears running down his cheeks, and gasping for breath, he, between his spasms, managed to articulate: "Bill, the blasted stuff ain't catsup at all, you know!" An hour later, when Howland and Warner left, the Englishman was sitting on the veranda, assuming an air of forced calmness, such as one sometimes sees in the walls of a brick structure that has had everything combustible within it burned out, and while the embers are still all hot in the cellar.—Sacramento Herald.

CROSSING THE ALPS.—At this point begins the ascent of the Simplon Pass, across the Alps. To one whose ideas of mountain travel are derived from experience on the Pacific side of the American continent, the passage of the Alps is a surprise and a delight. Although the altitude attained is not so great as on the lowest pass of the Sierras, and the grade is not appreciably different, the scenery is much grander. I think I have had as impressive distant views in the higher Sierras as in the Alps; but never have I realized such a sense of the sublimity of towering peaks, and foaming cataracts, and yawning chasms. Your path winds about the base of splintered crags which pierce the sky; you ride under and over soaring waterfalls, and are ever looking down upon deep ravines and through dark gorges, or at the immense fields of eternal snow above you. The queer old coach, called a diligence, lurches heavily over the broad, smooth, stoneless and dustless road, toiling upward at a pace enabling full enjoyment of the scenery, and the day employed in the journey is apt to be marked with a white stone.

The descent into the Valley of the Rhone is so much like a ride from Glenbrook to Carson that description is not required for Enterprise readers; and as we have reached the cars, we may as well close this episode.—A. N. Fisher in the Virginia Enterprise.

At the East the greenback currency is the money standard of values in all mercantile transactions. In the New York market silver coin sells at the following rates, greenback prices: Trade dollars, 95¢; half dollars, 94¢; small silver coins, 90¢. Here trade dollars are almost at par with gold, and half and quarter dollars are worth ninety-eight cents gold, some fifteen cents or more on a dollar than they are worth at the East. Sacramento Herald.

ANOTHER COAL BED.—The Lyon county Times says: Through George Shaw, of Dayton, we learn that what is now thought to be an extensive coal field has been recently discovered in Palmyra District, in this county, a short distance from the Whitman mine. Several sacks of the coal have been brought into Dayton and tested, and it is found to be very free from slate, and to contain a large quantity of mineral pitch. It is of a deeper color and very much harder than the El Dorado Canyon coal, though it will probably be found much of the same quality as the shaft is deepened. A meeting of the stockholders was held in Dayton on Tuesday evening last, to organize a company to work the discovery, and the following officers were elected: G. C. Fish, President, C. L. Ahl, Secretary; James Donovan, Treasurer. An assessment was levied, and operations will commence at once. The next meeting of the Company will be held September 10, proximo. The Pittsburg Coal Mining Company is the name selected by the stockholders.

LESSON FOR LAWYERS.—The Supreme Court yesterday rendered a decision involving the right of an attorney to compromise a suit without the consent of his client. The case is entitled Preston against Hill. It appears that in 1866 Thomas Hill filed a complaint in the Seventh District Court against R. J. and R. M. Preston, to foreclose a mortgage for $17,000. The defendant set up an offset and counter claim. It seems that when the case was on trial the attorneys for the respective parties agreed to compromise the suit, and a decree was entered in pursuance of this stipulation. Judgment was rendered for the defendants in the action. The case was appealed to the Supreme Court and a long opinion was filed in the suit. The Court decided that an attorney, by virtue of his retainer, has not the power to compromise a suit or to part with his client's property when the client is uninformed of the stipulation, and when he fails to acquiesce in the arrangement.—Sacramento Herald.

REDUCING THE FORCE.—Yesterday a number of men were drafted in the Belcher mine. Some persons state that all those working on the 1100-foot level were discharged, including even the pick boys; but to the truth of this we will not vouch. It is certain, however, that the force in both the Belcher and Crown Point mines is being steadily reduced. This is not because the ore in the mines is worked out, but because the mills on the Carson river cannot, on account of the low stage of water, reduce the accustomed quantity of ore. Fortunately for those thrown out of employment in the mines, the work on the side track to the Caledonia new shaft, gives a good number of those discharged a chance to work for a month or two, and the suffering that might otherwise result will be at least temporarily averted.—Gold Hill News, August 20.

MAN CUT AT SQUAWVILLE.—That vicious sheet, the Reese River Revue, contains the following: We are informed that a man was severely cut at Squawville last week, wounded by the hand of a lovely woman. The man who was cut was engaged in a difficulty with the woman's husband, who was getting the worst of the scrimmage, and the devoted wife rushed to the rescue with a butcher's knife, and punctured his opponent immediately under the fifth rib. The wounded man lost seven or eight gallons of blood, but suffered no serious injury, and will be all right when they transfuse the blood of a couple of cows into his veins.

E. A. LITTLEFIELD, a thorough printer, an experienced newspaper man and a fine gentleman, left by the overland train to-day for Elko, Nevada, whither he goes to commence the publication of a weekly newspaper to be called the Post, which we doubt not will ably advocate the interests and make known the resources of Eastern Nevada, and become a credit to and the pride of the section in which it is to be published.—Sacramento Herald, August 18.

The Julia Mining Company has been reincorporated under the name of the "Julia Consolidated Mining Company." The following are the Trustees of the new incorporation: Calvin W. Kellogg, James M. Livingstone, Thomas Cole, Joseph C. Palmer and John H. Kinkead. Capital stock, $11,000,000. It is said that several adjoining claims have been included in the new company.
